'IS ROYAL 'IGHNESS.

An Englishwoman Says He Works Hard and Wants to He Loved.

There has been so much fiction written about the Prince of Wales that perhaps the Woman's Cycle will make room for a little fact. The best answer to the unwarrantable and wickedly false slanders is the man in his own home at Sandringham. The estate is a model for all to copy. While others are preaching and criticising, the Prince of Wales has been at work.

The Prince of Wales took Sandringham, a wilderness, in 1861. It is now a picture, a dream and a poem. In 1870 he began to reside there, and since then the old huts have been torn down, pretty cottages have been put up, cottages in the Gothic style, built with every convenience, containing five or more well ventilated rooms, outhouse and a garden. Every cottager has plenty of flowers and vegetables, and all compete at the horticultural show every year, where prizes are given for flowers, vegetables, needle-work, cooking, and the most cleanly cottages, or best kept, or prepared, or made domestic exhibit of any kind. The Prince never has a day of less than sixteen hours labor, while the cottagers leave off work at three o'clock every day and have the rest of the time for recreation, their own gardenwork, or reading. There is no case of want; no liquor is sold on the place; if wine or brandy is required in sickness the vicar supplies it, and attends to each case. No "public house" is on or near the estate. The villagers have a clubhouse and a library, where the news of the day in papers and books can always be read. There are refreshments—tea and coffee, etc.-at a cheap rate. The Prince is a firm friend of workingmen's clubs, and does not believe in liquor saloons. No trains are run to the estate on Sunday, and all attend the church. When the family is at home the Prince and Princess and the household attend twice a day.

The Prince and Princess are personally known to everybody in Sandringham, and they and their families call upon their neighbors, and are known as being their personal friends.

Beside the village school there is a training-school, at which the hand is educated as well as the brain. In this the Prince carries out his father's idea, who had all his children taught a trade by which they could earn their living.

The Princess says it is her ambition in life to mind her own business; the Prince, that he wishes to be loved, and a more perfect gentleman or more cultivated man and truer friend the century has not produced .- Florence Grey, in Woman's Cycle.

The Latest in Footwear.

Colored velvet and Swedish leather boots and shoes are in great demand. They are produced in as many as twenty shades, consequently there is little difficulty in matching the gown. The shade most atronized is a rich russet, as it harmonizes with most dresses, and, with a pretty gold buckle on the toe, is suitable for afternoon or evening wear. Dark wine-color is another useful shade, and gray is still very popular, silver or cut-jet buckles being worn upon these shoes. Embossed leather is employed for making many dainty slippers worn with tea-gowns. If the leather is creamwhite, a fine floral design wrought in gold or bronze is alike pretty and effective. Undressed sandals of all colors are decorated with bits of fine imitation jewelry. The embroidery seen on the toes of some of the white silk shoes is beautifully executed with pearls, turquoise stones, and other simulated gems. Sometimes slippers are ornamented with a network of gold and silver threads, and an ornament in the form of leaves, executed with silk and silver, is substituted for the customary buckle.-N. Y Post.

When?

When sores break out on your person, when pimples cover your face, when you feel weak and debilitated, and your nervous system feels shattered, when you have aches and pains, when your appetite fails, when you are troubled with dyspepsia, when there is a general functional derangement and life hardly seems worth living, give Dr. Bull's Sarsaparilla a trial and you will be delighted at its pleasing effect. As a general health restorer and strengthener of the whole system it is superior to any other compound. It will not harm the most delicate invalid and has saved thousands from a premature grave. You wrong yourself when you delay giving it a trial.

THE crab may not be as good eating as the lobster but it does very well on a pinch. -Elmira Gazetto.

A girl should always wear her sleeve long enough to laugh in it.—Dallas (Tex.)

A GREAT mistake perhaps was made when Dr. Sherman named his great remedy Prickly Ash Bitters; but it is presumed that at that time all remedies for the blood, etc., were called Bitters. Had he called it Prickly Ash "Regulator," "Curative," or almost anything but Bitters, it undoubtedly would have superseded all other preparations of similar character. The name Bitters is misleading; it is purely a medicine, and cannot be used as a beverage.
